

Inuit Lifelong Skills

The Inuit lifelong skills are being developed by Kativik Ilisarniliriniq's culture and land survival department. They describe authentic activities cultivate and nurture a whole person.

Building livable shelters

Adopting fishing, hunting and picking skills

Designing and repairing material resources

Using knowledge of the elements

Practicing forms of navigation

Communicating in mother tongue effectively

Putting understanding of weather to use

Exercising measure of safety and critical judgment

Sharing accurate knowledge through story or analogy

Working compassionately in community

Expressing a sense of place

When you identify the learning outcomes of your lesson, make sure that your academic objectives corroborate Inuit knowledge and that they work together towards the development of one or more of the Inuit lifelong skills.
